

Considering CBD Oil?

More than two years ago I started giving my severely medically complex daughter CBD Oil. My daughter's seizures were going to be the death of her. It did not matter to me if giving CBD Oil to a minor was considered taboo or if it was even legal. The Mamma Bear in me took over. Saving my daughters life was the only thing that mattered.

It hit me that this was the first time in ten years I was not involving my daughters Health Care Team. They had repeatedly saved her life, listened to my feedback and trusted my judgement. They gave me a long leash because we had an established trust. Why then, would I think they would not hear me out with CBD Oil?

Appointments were made and I explained that I had decided on a treatment without consulting them for fear of what they would think. This was foolish of me to think given that over the last 10 years they were supportive whether we always agreed or not. Julia's Care Team has always been willing to try new treatments when it could possibly benefit Julia.

After apologizing and updating them on Julia's response to the oil, they informed me that it was a good thing I did not wait any longer to tell them because labs needed to be done. (CBD Oil can increase or decrease the levels of other medications) I was on the verge of tears thinking... if she was supposed to being monitored why did I not know this? I guess that is just one of many reasons why parents and physicians need to work together. The oil had changed the strength of some of her medications, luckily Julia was not affected by this.

Julia's outcomes with the use of CBD Oil and the help of her Health Care Team:

- successfully weaned from Depakote
- liver function returned to normal
- seizures control is better than we ever expected
- Julia is doing things developmentally that we thought were impossible
- She has better hand and eye control
- She is scoring much higher in her PT, OT, Speech Therapy sessions because of her increased control
- SHE SMILES MUCH MORE!
- Julia now giggles and laughs, she is more vocal

Imagine waiting almost 11 years to hear your child laugh!

Thank you for
paying for CBD Oil Daddy!

When will insurance providers
realize it is safer and more cost effective to pay for CBD Oil than it is to pay for a host of other pharmaceuticals, including medications for side effects of the initial medications?

HOW TO TALK WITH YOUR HEALTH CARE PROVIDER

You have probably spent hours of research on the benefits of cannabidiol (CBD) before deciding to try a high-CBD hemp extract. Understand that most providers may not know about the benefits of CBD, or even about the endocannabinoid system. That doesn't mean they are not good providers. It is important to manage your expectations and respect your provider's knowledge and position. If you appear reckless, your provider has the right to choose not to treat you.

What if my provider is concerned with legality?

The U.S. Agricultural Act of 2014 (also commonly referred to as the "Farm Bill") includes a section on the "Legitimacy of Industrial Hemp Research." Realm of Caring endorses hemp products that are Farm Bill compliant, with independent verification already completed by the Department of Agriculture. For reference, the full text of the bill is available on the Library of Congress' website.

What is industrial hemp and how is it defined in the Farm Bill?

Industrial hemp is the non-psychoactive, low-delta-9 tetrahydrocannabinol concentration [THC] oilseed and fiber varieties of the plant Cannabis sativa. Hemp has absolutely no use as a recreational drug. Section 7606 of the Farm Bill defines industrial hemp as "the plant Cannabis sativa L. and any part of such plant, whether growing or not, with a delta-9 tetrahydrocannabinol concentration of not more than 0.3 percent on a dry weight basis."

What is the purpose of Section 7606?

The U.S. House passed the hemp amendment to the Farm Bill in order to allow research to begin on industrial hemp and determine whether commercial production of hemp would be beneficial for American farmers and businesses.

What if my provider doesn't know anything about CBD?

Realm of Caring (ROC) is dedicated to educating providers and will even consult for patient care. Your provider can contact us at info@theroc.us or call 1-719-347-5400. We have established a provider network with educational resources and current research updates. Please encourage your provider to sign up at www.theroc.us. Immediately upon registering, they will receive a provider's guide to using cannabinoid products. This guide can also be downloaded from the client portal to give to your provider.

Additionally, there are hundreds of peer-reviewed articles on CBD available at the National Institute of Health PubMed website. You and your provider can search their database for the keywords "CBD" or "cannabidiol" along with your condition or symptoms to view papers specific to your condition. We also have other research resources available through our client portal.

Outside of Colorado there is question on legal interpretation of above law.
